Not illustrated. 1892 Excerpt: ...eye was operated on (cocaine) on the same morning by Graces operation. The capsule was not lacerated in the usual way, but was opened by a horizontal incision at its upper with a Grjefes knife, so as to keep soft matter from escaping into and floating about the anterior chamber, a practice I always carry out where there is soft material. Every portion of the opaque lens was removed by pressure with the spoon and small pieces of sponge and flooding the eye with boracic solution. There was scarcely any conjunctivitis. The eye was well by the 7th. On the 7th the left eye was operated on in precisely the same manner; no complication ensued, and the boy was discharged with excellent sight on the 17th April, when he left for Dhubri from which place he had come for the purpose of the operation. I could obtain no history of syphilitic taint on either of the parents side, but his mother also suffers from cataract. Case C.--Fibrocartilaginous tumour situated at the left side of the neck. Lobanoo, aged 45, Mussulman male, suffered from a swelling at left side of the neck for over six years, came to this dispensary, February 1891, when the tumour was diagnosed as of goitrous origin. He was sent home, and the tumour rapidly increased, and his life became a burden to him from the enormous size it had attained, and ha begged hard to be relieved. He was in very poor health, having suffered for two years from ague and is much emaciated. On admission March 28th, 1892, he was found to be in poor health with repeated attacks of ague. He has an enormous tumour springing from the leftside of the neck (the narrow end somewhat of a pedicle) from the middle, or rather slightly to the right of the middle line, pushing the larynx and trachea over to the right and reaching to the e...
